Heavy Losses Mark Kharkov Area Fighting

BATTLE FOR KHARKOV STILL ON

While the Russians reported further gains on the approaches to the great industrial city of Kharkov, Moscow and Berlin differed sharply as to the progress of fighting in the Izyum-Barvenkovo sector where the Germans attempted a counter-offensive. In the south, the Germans were in control of Kerch. Directions of attacks are indicated on the above map by arrows.

German Attack In District Around Smolensk Balked, Moscow Reports

By JAMES G. BROWN
MOSCOW, May 26—The revitalized southern Soviet armies held the initiative on the Kharkov front today and repulsed with bloody losses German attempts to push across a river on the Izyum sector, south of Kharkov.

A front-line dispatch to the government newspaper Izvestia stated that 1,200 German troops were left dead on the battlefield after two abortive attempts to cross the unnamed river.

The army newspaper Red Star reported that the Soviet immediately counter-attacked, recrossed the river and occupied an inhabited point. A fierce artillery duel was said to be raging.

More than 1,000 Nazis were killed on another section of the front, it was announced, as the Germans sought to advance behind a solid phalanx of tanks. Fifty tanks and two infantry regiments were used by the enemy, it was said.

The hard-driving Red armies were busy also on the Central and Leningrad fronts. A Nazi drive northeast of Smolensk was smashed and three villages retaken by counter-attacking Soviet troops.

The Germans were said to have sustained heavy losses.

Russian troops around Leningrad were reported to have captured heights northwest of the city.

Positions Consolidated

Meanwhile, the Red armies consolidated their hard won positions before the blood-spattered gates of the Ukrainian metropolises.

"During the night the Red army consolidated positions in the Kharkov direction and fought defensive engagements in the Izyum-Barvenkovo area," the noon communiqué said.

The Izyum-Barvenkovo offensive was said to be costing the Germans dearly in losses of tanks and men.

A new attack by the Germans on the Kalinin front, northwest of Moscow, was said by Red army officials to have been repulsed, with more than 200 Nazis killed.

Soviet planes were said to be dominating the air over Kharkov while Red army ground units are digging in for defensive operations to combat heavy German attacks in the Izyum-Barvenkovo sector.

Soviet officers reported that they are confident they can hold all territory so far regained from the Germans.

Grand Admiral Wants To Hit Supplies For Reds Before Leaving Shores

LONDON, May 26—German Grand Admiral Von Raeder has ordered his most daring U-boat commanders into the Gulf of Mexico, the St. Lawrence river estuary, the Atlantic and the Arctic in an effort to sink transports bound for Russia. It is hoped to sink the ships before they reach the high seas and the protection of United Nations warships, the military correspondent of the London Evening Standard said today.

He added that the Nazis now are building huge, improved U-boats of the Surfout type.

(The Surfout, recently sunk when in Free French service, was the largest submarine in the world. It had a virtually unlimited cruising range and carried a seaplane in a water-tight compartment on its deck.)

NEW YORK, May 26—Enemy submarine action in the Caribbean waters today claimed three more United Nations vessels.

The Navy announced the sinkings after survivors of a large American merchantman, a Panamanian tanker and a medium-sized Norwegian ship were landed in New York and Caribbean ports. A total of ten lives was lost.

Five of the 42-man crew of the American ship were lost when the vessel was torpedoed April 16. The survivors said they launched three lifeboats and made for port. The trip took 24 days.

The Norwegian vessel was sunk May 2 with a loss of three men. The 34 survivors told how a Nazi U-boat commander ordered his sub to the surface and inquired into the needs of the victims. He then ordered bandages, tins of meat and milk into their lifeboats.

Two men were lost when the Panamanian vessel was torpedoed April 28. The 48 survivors landed at a Caribbean port under their own power.

RECRUITING OF WOMEN'S ARMY TO BE STARTED

WASHINGTON, May 26—In another long step toward total war, the Army today announced that recruiting will begin throughout the nation tomorrow for women between the ages of 21 and 45 who desire appointment to the officer candidate school of the nation's first women's army.

With 450 set as the initial officer candidate quota for the women's army auxiliary corps, the doors of 440 regular Army recruiting stations throughout the nation will be thrown open tomorrow morning for those desiring to file applications.

The term of enrollment will be for the duration of the war and for not more than six months thereafter, officials said. Women (Continued on Page Two)

LONDON, May 26—Ten members of the U. S. Army Air Corps and two members of the Royal Australian Air Force were killed yesterday when a southbound transport plane crashed in central Australia, Reuters (British) news agency announced today.

(Reports from Melbourne said one American officer, several enlisted men and two Australian flyers were killed in the crash.)

The plane was destroyed. The disaster was caused by engine trouble. The victims were said to include a United States Army paymaster. The plane carried 15,000 pounds in British sterling and 300 pounds in silver money.

OPM Permitted Production For Private Uses Even After Army's Warning

WASHINGTON, May 26—The Senate defense committee today blamed lack of foresight by government officials, together with greed of the international "rubber trust" and private companies, for the American rubber crisis.

In a special report to the Senate the committee warned that experts predict that only 7,500,000 out of 30,000,000 passenger cars can be maintained in operation over the next three years.

The committee said through its chairman, Sen. Harry Truman (D. Mo.), that there will be no tires for civilians for three years. The committee also reported that there may be requisitioning of tires and urged consideration of nation-wide gasoline rationing.

The report revealed for the first time a letter from Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson to the Office of Production Management written May 8, 1941—seven months before Pearl Harbor—in which he warned that war conditions might halt the supply of crude rubber from the Dutch East Indies and British Malaya.

Warned of Curtailment

"It is not beyond the realms of possibility that imports of crude rubber may be sharply curtailed within the coming year," he said at that time, urging that a vast stock pile be created.

Past faults outlined by the committee included: 1. The OPM, predecessor to the War Production Board, allowed automobile production and rubber consumption to continue at an unprecedented rate in 1941 even after the Army warned of threats to the rubber supply.

2. Sir John Hay, representative of the international rubber committee, refused to agree to increase production to 100 percent until Secretary of Commerce Jesse H. Jones promised that a government rubber reserve would not be thrown on the market to depress prices.

3. The shipping situation was poorly handled, with the Dutch insisting on using their own ships and cargoes being poorly routed.

4. Japan got some rubber from the Rubber Reserve company, RFC subsidiary, by bidding as low as one-sixteenth of a cent a pound above United States bids.

5. Authority over building up a stock pile was not placed in one man.

LOVER ABSOLVES GIRL IN MURDER OF RICH REFUGEE

NEW YORK, May 26—The dramatic courtroom confession of Eli Shonbrun, which absolved the woman he loved and John D. Cullen of the murder of Mrs. Susan Flora Reich, will be subjected to a blistering cross-examination today by Assistant District Attorney Jacob Grumet.

Shonbrun, the sallow former dress salesman, electrified the crowd-packed court with the announcement from the witness stand that he and his uncle, Murray Hirsch, alone were responsible for the suffocation-murder of the wealthy 52-year-old Polish refugee.

"Murray and I murdered the woman entirely alone," Shonbrun testified as he sought to clear Madeline Webb and John D. Cullen of the slaying which occurred March 4 at the Hotel Sutton.

"It's an act for which I'm willing to pay, but no one else had anything to do in that room," he added.

Sprinkling his testimony with violent protestations of love for the former Oklahoma A. & M. honor student whose bid for Broadway fame was confined to work as a World's Fair nudie, Shonbrun sneered with apparent satisfaction as he implicated his uncle in the murder which followed Mrs. Reich's refusal to surrender a $1,500 diamond ring.

Hirsch, who was also indicted for the slaying, was granted a separate trial after he had turned state's witness.

CHIEFS OF U. S. ARMY, NAVY AIR CORPS ARRIVE

Recent Statements Regarding Joint Action Against Reich Recalled

By LEO V. DOLAN
LONDON, May 26—Excitement over the possibility of a "second front" rose to fever pitch today with the arrival in London of high ranking United States air, tank and ground force commanders.

Heading the American delegation were Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Commander of the Army air forces; Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of the Navy bureau of aeronautics; Maj. Gen. Mark W. Clark, chief of staff of the Army ground forces; and Maj. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, chief of the operations division of the War department.

Clark is an infantry specialist, Eisenhower a tank expert.

While no official announcement was made beyond the terse statement that the American generals had arrived in London, recent statements by British leaders regarding joint American-British action against Germany were recalled.

All London newspapers devoted headlines to arrival of the visitors.

DAVENPORT, Eng., May 26—Leslie Hore-Belisha, former British war secretary, declared today that the successful establishment of a second front on the European continent might end the war this year.

relegating news of the Russian front to second place.

The Evening News predicted a "joint offensive against Germany."

It was expected that Gen. Arnold's visit would be of brief duration and that he would concentrate on laying groundwork for close cooperation between American air forces and the R.A.F.

Conditions Different

It was pointed out that weather conditions and combat technique in Europe are radically different from what American airmen get at home. For this reason it was considered almost certain that Gen. Arnold will visit the several American eagle squadrons of the R.A.F.

The Americans rested briefly after their arrival and then conferred over the breakfast table with U. S. Ambassador John G. Winant.

They planned to meet almost immediately with high ranking British military leaders.

Informed circles said that the lack of effective dive-bombers thus far had been one of the factors which kept Britain from establishing a second front. It is felt that this situation will be remedied shortly.

Most observers are convinced that the arrival in Britain of strong U. S. bomber and fighter (Continued on Page Two)

WAYNE TOWNSHIP FEVER CASES AT STANDSTILL

Wayne township scarlet fever epidemic remained unchanged Tuesday with a total of 13 cases discovered by county health officials. About 30 Wayne pupils attending Circleville high were taken home Monday after Dr. A.D. Blackburn, health commissioner, advised such a precautionary move.

Wayne pupils who take up residence other than at home and who pass an incubation period of seven days may, with permission of their physician, attend closing activities of the school next week. They must stay away from all public gatherings during the seven day period.

Any wishing to take advantage of this opportunity, Principal J. Wray Henry pointed out, may return after interviewing Dr. Blackburn.

Lansing Factory Blast Kills Two

LANSING, Mich., May 26—Two war workers were killed today and a third was reported near death after an explosion tore through and set afire a building of the Fisher Body Corporation plant.

Killed were Wallace S. Irish, 45, of Grand Ledge, and Roy H. Anderson, 29, of Lansing.

Reported near death was Kenneth Zentmyer, 31, of Eaton Rapids.

Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, state police representatives and city authorities began an investigation.

It could not be determined immediately how many were at work at the time of the blast, around 8:30 a. m.

The explosion, heard for several blocks, shattered one wall of the building and rocked other nearby buildings.

While firemen from four engine companies reported the flames "under control," they said the heat was so intense it barred them from entering the building.

Possible Cause Studied

Unofficially it was believed the blast may have been caused by seepage or damage to a gas main. The Fisher body plant, a division of General Motors, is engaged entirely in war work. While authorities pointed out that as yet there was no indication of sabotage, state police joined city investigators in an effort to determine cause of the blast.

In Detroit, John S. Bugas, in charge of the FBI, said agents were already on their way to Lansing to investigate.

10 MILLIONS TO BE TRANSFERRED TO DEFENSE JOBS

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 26—Men with genuine dependents may feel "reasonably safe" that they will not be called for military service this year and some 10,000,000 persons may expect to be transferred from private business to war industries before January, 1943.

These messages were left today with the Institute of War Problems at Harvard university by Major General Lewis B. Hershey, national director of Selective Service.

Explaining why men with "genuine" dependents probably would not be drafted this year, he said:

"We are planning to avoid unnecessarily jeopardizing the genuine American family which supplies our future citizens. The family must be nurtured and preserved, but it must not be made the refuge for those who want to evade military service."

"Everyone—young and old," said General Hershey, "may expect to be called into some sort of service. This includes women and children—depending on the length of the war."

He termed the 18-19-year-old class an "area of potential reserve" but admitted "when we are going to draw on it, I don't know."

MORE STEEL—Production of steel is at its year record high of 99.6 percent of capacity again this week.

MORE MOTORS—Buick's aircraft engine plant in Chicago soon will be a year and a quarter ahead of production schedules, according to the management.

MORE SHIPS—A new Navy patrol vessel which started life as a private yacht but was converted on the ways was launched at City Island, New York.

MORE HONORS—Award of the Navy "E" to 13 more plants which have qualified for it by beating production schedules or showing unusual efficiency was announced by the Navy department.

STILL MORE STEEL—Another steel plate to bolster production of ships for the Navy was opened at Birmingham, Ala., to increase plate output in the district 50 percent or more.

MORE SUBS—A new Navy submarine, the U. S. S. Gurnard, will be launched June 1 at Groton, Conn.

LOVER ABSOLVES GIRL IN MURDER OF RICH REFUGEE

NEW YORK, May 26—The dramatic courtroom confession of Eli Shonbrun, which absolved the woman he loved and John D. Cullen of the murder of Mrs. Susan Flora Reich, will be subjected to a blistering cross-examination today by Assistant District Attorney Jacob Grumet.

Shonbrun, the sallow former dress salesman, electrified the crowded court with the announcement from the witness stand that he and his uncle, Murray Hirsch, alone were responsible for the suffocation-murder of the wealthy 52-year-old Polish refugee.

"Murray and I murdered the woman entirely alone," Shonbrun testified as he sought to clear Madeline Webb and John D. Cullen of the slaying which occurred March 4 at the Hotel Sutton.

"It's an act for which I'm willing to pay, but no one else had anything to do in that room," he added.

Sprinkling his testimony with violent protestations of love for the former Oklahoma A. & M. honor student whose bid for Broadway fame was confined to work as a World's Fair nude, Shonbrun sneered with apparent satisfaction as he implicated his uncle in the murder which followed Mrs. Reich's refusal to surrender a $1,500 diamond ring.

Hirsch, who was also indicted for the slaying, was granted a separate trial after he had turned state's witness.

Recent Statements Regarding Joint Action Against Reich Recalled

By LEO V. DOLAN
LONDON, May 26—Excitement over the possibility of a "second front" rose to fever pitch today with the arrival in London of high ranking United States air, tank and ground force commanders.

Heading the American delegation were Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Commander of the Army air forces; Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of the Navy bureau of aeronautics; Maj. Gen. Mark W. Clark, chief of staff of the Army ground forces; and Maj. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, chief of the operations division of the War department.

Clark is an infantry specialist, Eisenhower a tank expert.

While no official announcement was made beyond the terse statement that the American generals had arrived in London, recent statements by British leaders regarding joint American-British action against Germany were recalled.

All London newspapers devoted headlines to arrival of the visitors, relegating news of the Russian front to second place.

The Evening News predicted a "joint offensive against Germany."

It was expected that Gen. Arnold's visit would be of brief duration and that he would concentrate on laying groundwork for close cooperation between American air forces and the R.A.F.

Conditions Differed

It was pointed out that weather conditions and combat technique in Europe are radically different from what American airmen get at home. For this reason it was considered almost certain that Gen. Arnold will visit the several American eagle squadrons of the R.A.F.

The Americans rested briefly after their arrival and then conferred over the breakfast table with U. S. Ambassador John G. Winant.

They planned to meet almost immediately with high ranking British military leaders.

Informed circles said that the lack of effective dive-bombers thus far had been one of the factors which kept Britain from establishing a second front. It is felt that this situation will be remedied shortly.

Most observers are convinced that the arrival in Britain of strong U. S. bomber and fighter

WAYNE TOWNSHIP FEVER CASES AT STANDSTILL

Wayne township scarlet fever epidemic remained unchanged Tuesday with a total of 13 cases discovered by county health officials. About 30 Wayne pupils attending Circleville high were taken home Monday after Dr. A. D. Blackburn, health commissioner, advised such a precautionary move.

Wayne pupils who take up residence other than at home and who pass an incubation period of seven days may, with permission of their physician, attend closing activities of the school next week.

They must stay away from all public gatherings during the seven day period.

Any wishing to take advantage of this opportunity, Principal J. Wray Henry pointed out, may return after interviewing Dr. Blackburn.

on the island of Formosa off the South China coast and were possibly preparing for an invasion of Fukien province. Additional Japanese mechanized units had been landed in Indo-China, the Chinese spokesman said, it was also possible that the Japanese planned a full-scale invasion of Yunnan province on the Burma border.

In Chekiang province, adjoining Fukien on the north, Chinese forces battle valiantly against an overwhelmingly superior force of 100,000 Japanese advancing on Kihwa, a possible base for United Nations air raids on the Japanese mainland 600 miles away.

The enemy advanced from two directions but was reported held three kilometers to the south and 12 kilometers north of the town in bloody fighting which has already cost the Japanese 5,000 casualties.

Rabaul, Lae Hit

In the Australian war theatre United Nations bombers raided Rabaul, New Britain, and Lae, New Guinea. Despite bad weather and intense Japanese fighter and ground defense resistance, heavy damage was scored on the enemy airports and four Japanese fighters shot down. One United Nations bomber was lost.

Patrol planes, presumably American, were reported to have fought an axis submarine off the Brazilian coast. Some reports said the planes had sunk the submarine after a brisk attack.

must call in person for application blanks, which must be filled out and filed at one of the 52 main recruiting stations throughout the country.

Officer candidates must be citizens of the United States between the ages specified and may be either married or single. They must have had at least a high school education or its equivalent, be in good health "and of excellent character."

Limitations on height and weight vary according to age from a minimum of 105 pounds at five feet to a maximum of slightly more than 171 pounds at six feet.

June 4 has been set as the deadline for the filing of officer candidate applications.

PRIVATE DOESN'T CHIP IN FOR BONDS; HERE'S WHY!

NEW YORK, May 26—Private John J. Wondolowski was the only member of the medical corps unit at Fort Hancock who had not subscribed to the $125 a month deduction from his pay to buy War Bonds.

"Look here, John," Lieut. Col. James R. Boyd probably said in explaining the War Bond plan to the $21-a-month doughboy.

John grinned, opened his shirt and extracted $3,750 from a money belt which he put down on the colonel's desk for a $5,000 bond.

The Fort Hancock medical unit today is believed to be the first such unit in the country to have a 100 percent subscription for the purchase of War Bonds.

AUNT OF CINCINNATI POLICE OFFICER DEAD

Mrs. Mary Keller, 89, of New Holland, aunt of Patrolman Alva Shasteen of Cincinnati, died Monday afternoon in Chillicothe hospital, death being the result of complications which followed a hip fracture suffered three weeks ago. Her husband, Shepherd Keller, died 20 years ago. Survivors include two daughters, Mrs. Florence Overly of near Cincinnati, and Mrs. Eva Hickie of New Holland, and a son, Earl, of Woodstock.

The funeral will be Wednesday at 2 p. m. in the New Holland Methodist church, the Rev. V. C. Stump officiating. Burial will be in Springbank cemetery, Yellow-bud, by Kirkpatrick and sons.

No matter by what you multiply the number nine, the results will always add up to nine. For example, 9 times 7 is 63, and 6 plus 3 is nine. Nine times 65 is 585, and 5 plus 8 plus 5 equals 18, and 8 plus 1 equals 9.

The Mount of Olives was venerated by the Jews. It was called the Mountain Light, because at one time there was lighted on it a beacon fire to signalize the appearance of each new moon.

MILLER TO STAY OUT OF CONTEST FOR STATE POST

Three Candidates Decline To Leave Race During Democratic Confab

FIELD IS WIDE OPEN

Debt Of $25,000 Remains; Reynoldsburg Man To Run For Senate

COLUMBUS, May 26 — The question of who will face Governor Bricker as the Democratic gubernatorial candidate in the November elections remained unanswered today despite efforts of party chieftains to decide on a "harmony program."

In an effort to provide a candidate who would receive the backing of all factions, party leaders had sought to draft Ray T. Miller, powerful Cuyahoga county chairman, for the nomination by persuading the three major avowed candidates to withdraw in his favor.

However, the trio—State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson, Industrial Commission Member Clarence Knisley, and ex-Congressman John McSweeney of Wooster—flatly told a committee of eight last night that they were in the race to stay. Following their decision to fight it out in the August primaries, Miller stated that he was not a candidate.

"I am not a candidate for governor," he stated following a four-hour meeting behind closed doors. "I am very grateful to those who believed I should be a candidate."

Al A. Horstman, of Dayton, chairman of the state central committee, then admitted failure of the committee's efforts by announcing:

"We were unable to reach any kind of a harmony program. The field is open to anyone who wants to run for governor."

Asked to Decide

During the meeting, Ferguson, Knisley and McSweeney steadfastly refused to withdraw in Miller's favor despite the committee's plea that he "carry the banner of a united party" and even rejected a plea from the former Cleveland mayor that they decide on a candidate among themselves. It was suggested that they go into a separate room to reach a decision, drawing a name from a hat if necessary in the interest of party harmony.

Another suggestion advanced was that they leave the selection of a candidate from among the trio to a special committee of party leaders. This also was rejected, all standing on their "rights as Democrats" to remain in the race.

The "Draft Miller" plan first was originated at a meeting of 40 county Democratic leaders in Columbus two weeks ago. At that time the committee was appointed to attempt to persuade Ferguson, Knisley and McSweeney to withdraw.

Miller apparently based his statement that he was not a candidate on their refusal, as before the meeting he told reporters that "I have not made up my mind."

Another point up for discussion at the meeting was the pressing problem of the state party's debt of more than $25,000. All agreed that they would "do our best" to liquidate the debt.

Miller apparently squashed reports that he was angling for complete control of the party machine by stating that he would not accept the position of state chairman "under any circumstances."

The committee was composed of the following party leaders: Horstman, Miller, Walter F. Heer, Franklin county chairman; John F. Nolan, Steubenville; Clarence A. Graham, Zanesville; William J. Leonard, Cincinnati; Eugene H. Hanhart, Dover, and Walter Mitchell, Youngstown. A ninth member, John J. Quinn of Toledo, who had been one of the strongest supporters for the "Draft Miller" movement, failed to attend.

Other developments in the political scene: Harold W. Houston of Urbana, Republican floor leader and speaker pro tem, of the Ohio house of representatives, announced he would not be a candidate for a third term. He said his obligations in his home county prevented his running.

George Clark, Reynoldsburg, an examiner in the state auditor's office, resigned to become a candi-

MUSEUM ADDED TO MOUND CITY PARK LAY OUT

Archaeological museum at Mound City state memorial, near Chillicothe, was opened Sunday to the public. Albert C. Spetnagel of Chillicothe, donor of the museum, made a short presentation talk and Henry C. Shetrone, director of the Ohio State Archaeological and Historical society, accepted the gift for the society. Mr. Spetnagel stated that the museum was for the education and enjoyment not only of the people of Chillicothe but of Ross county and of the nation.

Director Shetrone, in accepting the museum, sketched the history of archaeology in Ross county and mentioned the important role that Mr. Spetnagel has played in the various explorations and in particular in securing the Mound City area from the United States government as a permanent national and state memorial.

Featuring the museum display is a case of specimen Mound Builder implements and ornaments from Mr. Spetnagel's personal collection. These are housed in a square glass case and spotlighted from above, giving an impressive effect.

Eugene D. Rigney, president of the Ross County Historical society, acted as chairman, and welcomed the guests.

date for the Democratic nomination for state senator from the tenth district, composed of Franklin and Pickaway counties.

Herbert S. Duffy, Columbus, Democratic attorney general from 1937 to 1939, filed nominating petitions for nomination to the position he formerly held.

WHEAT STORAGE PROBLEM VITAL; CARRYOVER BIG

Many Pickaway county wheat producers are making arrangements now for the storage of wheat on their own farms this year. Current preparations for farm storage of wheat have resulted from what will likely be the most severe wheat storage situation in United States history.

A record carry-over of wheat finds 630,000,000 bushels already in storage throughout the country. And present prospects indicate a 1942 bumper crop of about 800,000,000 bushels, a total wheat inventory after this year's harvest that creates a staggering shortage of storage space.

Commenting on the wheat storage problem, Lawrence Liston, Pickaway county field representative for the Production Credit association, said Tuesday:

"Many of our members and their neighbors are recognizing the problem that will be facing every wheat grower in a few weeks. Since they do recognize the real situation, they are building additional wheat storage facilities right on their own farms."

"We've been advised by the Farm Credit administration of Louisville that on the basis of present storage conditions and nationwide crop prospects, the usual storage places will not be available for wheat this year. The farm storage of wheat will also go a long way in helping to prevent transportation shortages during the present emergency. And construction of storages now while nails and lumber are available means that the storage facilities will be ready when needed. That's why the production credit association is assisting responsible farmers by financing the building of farm wheat storages."

Mr. Liston explained that the seven cents per bushel storage allowance available under the recently-passed quota-loan system will aid farmers in repaying credit

Progress Being Made In Pickaway's Bond Sales

Earl Smith, Pickaway county chairman of government bond sales, reported Tuesday that tabulations showed a total of sales amounting to $20,687.50 for the first 15 days of May.

The May quota for Pickaway county has been set at $30,400 with some 100 persons throughout the area participating in a pledge drive in an effort to put the sales over the top.

The entire program has been wonderfully received by the public, according to a statement by Mr. Smith, and the work being done by the various volunteers is a splendid example of wholehearted cooperation.

Communities throughout the nation are conducting similar bond sale drives with the local percentage of more than one half received by the middle of the month being typical all over the state.

EUGENE BORING NAMED TO FEDERAL ART POST

Eugene Boring of Columbus, WPA recreation director for four central Ohio counties including Pickaway, has been advanced to the position of district supervisor of the federal WPA art project, and will have 20 counties under his supervision.

Boring's successor in the recreation job has not been announced.

EMPLOYEES' DAYS

We Work Together at Penney's

An interesting thing about this Company is that its employees are called "Associates." We don't work FOR the store manager or his assistant, we work WITH them.

That was Mr. Penney's idea when he started his first store... everybody in the business worked in it co-operatively. Our Employees' Days are a good example of this spirit. The manager steps aside and lets us run the show. And you, the customers benefit by exceptional savings.

SOBER SECOND THOUGHT

THE light-hearted mood that swept over the country last week was of short duration. Fortunately it was cut short not by new catastrophe but by a wave of sober reasoning.

Government and public shared in that wave of optimism, which was based on the improved war situation in Europe and the brightening armament situation in this country. There have indeed been two great contributions toward winning the war — the Russian stand against Germany and the American war production. But the Japanese still have their way in the Orient, and the victory in Europe and Africa is not yet won.

It may still be a long war, and it will surely be a hard one, straining the best efforts of the Allied Nations and costing heavily in blood, treasure and human endurance. This is a time for hard work and stout hearts, sure of victory but not boasting prematurely.

Yes, we shall be perfectly pleased with our work, and that is the perfectest hell of it!"

THE FATE OF HOLLAND

THE Dutch are to be punished anew for disliking Nazi rule. Himmler, head of the Gestapo, is to give the rebellious Netherlands his personal attention. There is a rumor that Holland is to be incorporated into the German state and lose even its name. "Niedermark," the Low District, a German name corresponding in meaning to the more familiar Netherlands, is to be the new title for a country that has been famous for a thousand years.

There is precedent for this. Austria had an ancient and honorable history as one of the great states of Europe, yet now it is swallowed up by Germany, as if it

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . . Hour By Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up and about the village in sunshine that I hoped indicated the end of the rainy season. Have had plenty of moisture for a while. Weeds getting a great start in gardens and corn fields, and some corn yet to be planted. Wheat looks great, and the earliest harvest of many a year is indicated. Unless something unexpected hits that wheat we also should have a bumper crop. Storage of grain will be a big problem this year. Ships and rail cars that were used for storage in years gone now are transporting sinews of war.

Meet the Big Sisie. Grace Valentine owns a great turkey gobbler. Two days he was away from home, and Grace made a tour of the farm looking for him. And she found him, too. Sitting on a nest of eggs. Had chased the hen away and was keeping house all by himself. He in turn was chased back to the barnlot and the hen reinstalled in her proper domain, but the Big Sisie got out, returned to the nest and chased the hen away. There is that gobbler today just about to become a "mother". Believe it or not.

Among the very last to abandon plans for northern fishing trips this year were Bill Cady and Fred Wittich. But they have given in, finally. Well, there are many worse places to fish than this territory, and the scenery along some of our streams is almost as good as along many bodies of water in the far north. With many fishermen active here this year numerous new "holes" will be discovered. Not long now until opening of the bass season.

Saw the beautiful service flags that are to be distributed by the American Legion club to designate homes of members represented in Uncle Sam's armed forces. Quite the finest I have seen. Remember the service flags of the last war? Well, we should do the same thing now.

Real honor and distinction attached to a home that has sent a son to the wars to defend those of us who can not go.

In the evening did attend the Defense Council meeting at the postoffice and heard reports indicating progress in all departments. Tests of the efficiency of defense organizations now are being planned for the district, and some of them will be real tests. More and more does Ohio become the center of the nation's defense effort and we stand in as much danger here as in any part of the land. One trouble is that the older folk who remember the last war think that this is another struggle like that one. The worst that could possibly happen to us then was a sub raid on the Atlantic coast. Now, almost anything can happen, and we can be prepared to meet any possible emergency or we can be prepared to take the consequences. And the consequences will not be pleasant. Of that you may be absolutely certain.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON'S WAR OPTIMISM

WASHINGTON — Behind - the - scenes, there is a genuinely optimistic feeling about the war picture. A lot of the old discouragement of Pearl Harbor-Singapore-Java days, then very pronounced backstage, has now evaporated. Production is proving an industrial miracle. More tanks were produced last month than during all of the last war. Plane production is now over 3,300 monthly. The army is becoming better equipped and better trained every day.

However, coupled with this optimism is some very realistic thinking which, while it can't be labelled discouraging, nevertheless gives definite cause for pause before shouting any victory hurrahs.

This realistic thinking is concerned with the great difficulty of creating a second front against Hitler in Europe. Here are some of the cold, inescapable facts we are up against.

First, it is estimated that Hitler has an army of around 4,000,000. Russia has 6,000,000 men, but they are not so well trained and equipped as the Germans. Yet Hitler, despite the power of his army, has been extremely careful not to get involved on two fronts at once. He has picked each objective coldly, carefully, and knocked it out separately.

Even the Russians, with their tremendous army, shy away from the idea of having another front created against them in Siberia.

THREE U. S. FRONTS

Yet, the United States with a total army of around 3,000,000 men, and with most of these still in the United States, must think of three fronts—Australia, the Middle East, and the prospective front in Europe.

Of course, American troops for the European front still are only a token force. Actually England has enough men under arms to constitute an invading army. But the main problem facing both England and the United States is ships.

Nazi announcements of ship sinkings show that they have a pretty good idea of U. S.-British ship tonnage, so it can be no secret that we lack not only the ships to keep a big army supplied with munitions, but might find it very difficult to take an invading force across the channel in the first place, and keep it supplied in the second place.

Third is the problem of landing on the European continent at all. During the two years that the Nazis have held the coast of France, Holland and Belgium, they have not been idle. They have taken all the French guns out of the Maginot Line and studded the coast with them. This shore is probably better fortified than the British coast—and Hitler was not able to invade England.

Therefore, the surest means of pounding Hitler in Europe continues to be from the air. And this undoubtedly will be the chief U. S.-British strategy. But despite the almost super-human obstacles, it is still considered absolutely necessary, somehow or other, to get a land force on the Continent to set up a second front (Continued on Page Eight) were no more important than the old little principalities of Baden and Reuss.

If Hitler read the Bible, he might find there something about the curse upon him who removes his neighbor's landmark.

Treatment of War Nerves Presents Many Difficulties

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

YESTERDAY WE described the reports which have reached us from our English brethren concerning the forms of nervous and mental upset which occur as a result of war stresses with exposure to actual bombing or personal losses and sorrows. They fall, as

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

We saw, in the familiar patterns of nervous breakdown in civilian life, although they are precipitated somewhat more suddenly and perhaps hit a larger group of the population. In other words, those individuals who, under the ordinary duties of civilian life, would have nervous systems entirely adequate to carry on their ordinary occupations, go to pieces under war conditions.

Treating Neuroses

How do we treat these war neuroses and nervous breakdowns? Well, very much as any other nervous condition is treated. War conditions, of course, create situations which modify our approach. For instance, perhaps the ideal form of treatment of any condition of this kind is rest and isolation in a quiet environment. But where in the war-torn British Islands is it possible to find such a place, or is it possible to make room for these nervous derelicts when badly wounded men need beds and rest and quiet more than any other group in the population?

Again, analysis and review of the patient's history, education, and guidance with the patient's life history in view, is good treatment for these cases. But under war conditions, have we got time to spend on these people when the wounded demand the attention of the limited number of physicians?

Neurotic in War Time

It is perfectly natural that the neurotic should be more or less neglected in war time. He may arouse our sympathy and may be very interesting at other times, but he is not in real danger and he must have secondary consideration. Surprisingly enough, the neurotic learns this in war time and very often manages to make surprising adjustments on his own hook without any help at all.

It is like a household in which one member appears to take a fiendish delight in obtruding her own symptoms into the picture, or setting everybody at loggerheads and upsetting everybody's plans on account of her whims. Then some member of the family actually gets dangerously ill and she finds herself in the corner with nobody to listen to her symptoms, and begins to realize that she really has a place of secondary importance which she has created by her own course of life. Everyone has known of instances like this where somebody else's sickness cured a neurotic permanently.

Change Since Last War

There is a curious change of distribution of nervous symptoms between this war and the last war as noted in England. In the last war soldiers suffered from shell shock which was simply a form of hysteria induced by their experiences in being under shell fire. These soldiers found that when they were reduced to a state of uselessness, they were sent back to England and put in a nice, safe hospital. But in this war, behind the lines, in the civilian population it is as dangerous or even more dangerous than on the front lines, so the soldier learns to control his shell shock.

However, as time and circumstances permit, the tried and tested methods of psychological treatment are those which can be used in the case of war nerves—first, suggestion; second, persuasion or moralization; third, rest and isolation; and fourth, personality analysis; and fifth, re-education and guidance.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

J. C. S.: Is there any harm in taking an overdose of vitamins?
Answer: Toxic symptoms have been reported from the excessive use of vitamin D and thiamine chloride (vitamin B).

P. V.: Can a tumor of the brain be X-rayed?

Answer: Neither the brain itself nor a tumor of the brain throws a shadow on the X-ray film, but by emptying the ventricles of the brain of their fluid and allowing air to flow into them, deformities are shown up which indicate the presence of a tumor.

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO

TOMMY supposed, since things did seem to be perking up, with Tibby suddenly, unaccountably being nice to him, that he ought to be willing to continue to let Steena manage her campaign. If she had a plan, however, he wished she would tell him what it was. "Why not let me in on it?" he suggested.

Steena was evasive; she said, as she had before, just to leave everything to her. She assured him that if he did, everything would work out smoothly for each of them.

Tommy had to be satisfied with that, although he actually was not. He was like a race horse at the post, eager to be off, keyed to fever pitch. He wanted to race to the finish, which, of course, was Tibby. He wanted to clear matters up with her.

But he supposed that Steena, being so clever, knew best. He did not really believe that Tibby was jealous just because he had been sending Steena flowers and prettifying to give her a rush. He supposed, rather, that Tibby wondered what had come over him, why he was behaving so unnaturally. Still the fact remained that Tib had changed, that she had gone out of her way to be nice to him. He felt he ought to show her, by some small gesture, that he appreciated that, how much it meant to him.

The next time the florist's boy delivered flowers there were two boxes, the usual long one with red roses addressed to Steena, and a smaller one addressed to Miss Elizabeth Lane. These last Tommy had paid for himself, because naturally he did not want to charge them to Steena's account.

"Violets!" Tibby exclaimed, lifting the fragrant, dewy blossoms from waxed paper. "Imagine violets at this time of year!" They reminded her of the springs she had gone walking with Tommy in the woods back home in search of the first wild flowers. Was that why he had sent them? To remind her of those other springs, to tell her that they might come again one day, that everything, even friendship, was not over between them?

"Wasn't it nice of Tommy?" Steena said, although she did not think it nice of him at all, not when he had promised to leave everything up to her. "I told him I was sure you liked violets," she added. That was only a very white fib; Tibby could draw her own conclusions from it, however. Everything was fair in the game Steena had to play.

The stars in Tibby's dark eyes faded; the brief lift of happiness left her blank. If Steena had told Tommy to send the violets, as she must if she had suggested what flowers to send, they did not have any meaning.

"You see," Steena hurried on, since this seemed an excellent opening if she were to try to carry out the plan she had, "it's all rather mixed up, you and Tommy having been such friends, but you know you said, Tibby, that you didn't mind if I went out with him. I hope you won't mind what I'm going to tell you now." Steena's plan was still a bit vague, but she knew the time had come to do something drastic, to stir Wayne up and to make Tibby realize it was Tommy she apparently cared for.

"I shan't mind," Tibby said. She put the violets back in their waxed paper.

"Of course," Steena said, still speaking so that Tibby could put what construction she wished on the words. "Tommy hasn't actually asked me . . . yet. But I just wanted to be sure you wouldn't feel badly in case he does." Steena dropped her long lashes over her narrowed green eyes, but she could see that there were no stars in Tibby's dark ones now. "A girl always knows, you know," she added.

Tibby put the lid back on the box. The violets would die if they were not put in water, but what did that matter? It was odd, but it seemed as if nothing ever would matter very much again. "I shan't feel badly," Tibby said. How could you, when you felt as if you never would feel anything any more? "I hope," she added, "that you both will be very happy if Tommy does ask you to marry him, Steena."

That was the proper thing to say, wasn't it? Steena had said that a girl always knew, meaning her own heart, her answer, as well as when a man had lost his heart to her. Steena had had so much experience in affairs of the heart that she ought to know all right.

"Thank you for saying that," Steena said. She meant that, for now she knew Tibby did care for Tommy, even if Tibby did not know it herself. Again she told herself that it was not her fault if Tibby jumped at the wrong conclusions instead of the right ones. She was not at all sure that Tommy would approve of her method, but he ought to be mighty well pleased with the result. "I promise you, you'll be the first to know when it happens," she said.

Steena hoped that Wayne would react as well. If he thought she was considering marrying someone else, he would realize he would have to do something to put a stop to it. He would HAVE to make his gift a diamond solitaire, although Wayne might not be as easily misled as Tibby by a few vague hints. Steena might have to think up some way to convince him thoroughly.

Her plan was fairly well formulated now, as well as started, like a ball that would gather momentum as it ran down hill. All Steena had to do was to give it a little push.

Well, Tibby told herself, that's that! It had not been any use for her to make one last attempt to be nice to Tommy, to regain the old familiar footing. She knew now it never could be regained, certainly not if Tommy and Steena should become engaged. It had not taken him long, she reflected, to get over the old love and onto the new. Maybe that was why she felt as she did about it, sort of hurt and bewildered and as if it could not possibly come true.

Of course it could. It would be a very good thing in many ways if it happened. As she had thought before this, it would be a good thing for Tommy to marry someone with money of her own, with the right connections. Those were valuable assets for a young doctor to consider in choosing a wife. Tommy had not thought of them when he had asked Tibby to marry him—oh, how long ago that seemed! He would, no doubt, if he asked Steena, although maybe those were not what would count with him, either. Maybe this time Tommy, in proposing to a girl, would be certain, so that he would not have to withdraw his proposal right away.

It would be a good thing for Steena, as well. If she married Tommy, it would be for love, not for the millions that he did not have. Maybe Steena had discovered that love mattered most, although that did not seem like Steena. Marg had said that Tommy had "everything," since he was handsome and honest and clean. Tibby hoped that Steena would appreciate all that.

Love certainly changed things. It changed everything for Tibby, even the idea that Tommy might ask Steena to marry him. She did not realize that she was being femininely inconsistent, because Tibby herself was considering becoming engaged to someone else, too. At least she had promised Wayne she would let him know as soon as she could, but that seemed different, somehow.

Tommy would not care now if Tibby married a man too old and with too much money. It would not make a dent in him even. Steena would not mind, either, although she had so frankly admitted that she had hoped to land Wayne and his millions for herself.

There seemed no reason why Tibby should not give Wayne the answer he wanted. He had said it did not matter whether she was sure she loved him or not.

She was going out with him tonight. She supposed she was as sure now as she ever would be. It was silly for her to feel so upset, so sort of weepy, as if what she wanted most was a good old-fashioned cry. Maybe every girl felt like that when she finally reached an important decision.

THE FATE OF HOLLAND

THE Dutch are to be punished anew for disliking Nazi rule. Himmler, head of the Gestapo, is to give the rebellious Netherlands his personal attention. There is a rumor that Holland is to be incorporated into the German state and lose even its name, "Niedermark," the Low District, a German name corresponding in meaning to the more familiar Netherlands, is to be the new title for a country that has been famous for a thousand years.

There is precedent for this. Austria had an ancient and honorable history as one of the great states of Europe, yet now it is swallowed up by Germany, as if it

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON'S WAR OPTIMISM

WASHINGTON — Behind - the - scenes, there is a genuinely optimistic feeling about the war picture. A lot of the old discouragement of Pearl Harbor-Singapore-Java days, then very pronounced backstage, has now evaporated. Production is proving an industrial miracle. More tanks were produced last month than during all of the last war. Plane production is now over 3,300 monthly. The army is becoming better equipped and better trained every day.

However, coupled with this optimism is some very realistic thinking which, while it can't be labelled discouraging, nevertheless gives definite cause for pause before shouting any victory hurrahs.

This realistic thinking is concerned with the great difficulty of creating a second front against Hitler in Europe. Here are some of the cold, inescapable facts we are up against.

First, it is estimated that Hitler has an army of around 4,000,000. Russia has 6,000,000 men, but they are not so well trained and equipped as the Germans. Yet Hitler, despite the power of his army, has been extremely careful not to get involved on two fronts at once. He has picked each objective coldly, carefully, and knocked it out separately.

Even the Russians, with their tremendous army, shy away from the idea of having another front created against them in Siberia.

THREE U. S. FRONTS

Yet, the United States with a total army of around 3,000,000 men, and with most of these still in the United States, must think of three fronts—Australia, the Middle East, and the prospective front in Europe.

Of course, American troops for the European front still are only a token force. Actually England has enough men under arms to constitute an invading army. But the main problem facing both England and the United States is ships.

Nazi announcements of ship sinkings show that they have a pretty good idea of U. S.-British ship tonnage, so it can be no secret that we lack not only the ships to keep a big army supplied with munitions, but might find it very difficult to take an invading force across the channel in the first place, and keep it supplied in the second place.

Third is the problem of landing on the European continent at all. During the two years that the Nazis have held the coast of France, Holland and Belgium, they have not been idle. They have taken all the French guns out of the Maginot Line and studded the coast with them. This shore is probably better fortified than the British coast—and Hitler was not able to invade England.

Therefore, the surest means of pounding Hitler in Europe continues to be from the air. And this undoubtedly will be the chief U. S.-British strategy. But despite the almost super-human obstacles, it is still considered absolutely necessary, somehow or other, to get a land force on the Continent to set up a second front (Continued on Page Eight) were no more important than the old little principalities of Baden and Reuss.

If Hitler read the Bible, he might find there something about the curse upon him who removes his neighbor's landmark.

Treatment of War Nerves Presents Many Difficulties

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

YESTERDAY WE described the reports which have reached us from our English brethren concerning the forms of nervous and mental upset which occur as a result of war stresses with exposure to actual bombing or personal losses and sorrows. They fall, as we saw, into the familiar patterns of nervous breakdown in civilian life, although they are precipitated somewhat more suddenly and perhaps hit a larger group of the population. In other words, those individuals who, under the ordinary duties of civilian life, would have nervous systems entirely adequate to carry on their ordinary occupations, go to pieces under war conditions.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Treating Neuroses

How do we treat these war neuroses and nervous breakdowns? Well, very much as any other nervous condition is treated. War conditions, of course, create situations which modify our approach. For instance, perhaps the ideal form of treatment of any condition of this kind is rest and isolation in a quiet environment. But where in the war-torn British Islands is it possible to find such a place, or is it possible to make room for these nervous derelicts when badly wounded men need beds and rest and quiet more than any other group in the population?

Again, analysis and review of the patient's history, education, and guidance with the patient's life history in view, is good treatment for these cases. But under war conditions, have we got time to spend on these people when those who are organically ill or wounded demand the attention of the limited number of physicians?

Neurotic in War Time

It is perfectly natural that the neurotic should be more or less neglected in war time. He may arouse our sympathy and may be very interesting at other times, but he is not in real danger and he must have secondary consideration. Surprisingly enough, the neurotic learns this in war time and very often manages to make surprising adjustments on his own book without any help at all.

It is like a household in which one member appears to take a fiendish delight in obtruding his own symptoms into the picture, or setting everybody at loggerheads and upsetting everybody's plans on account of her whims. Then some member of the family actually gets dangerously ill and she finds herself in the corner with nobody to listen to her symptoms, and begins to realize that she really has a place of secondary importance which she has created by her own course of life. Everyone has known of instances like this where somebody else's sickness cured a neurotic permanently.

Change Since Last War

There is a curious change of distribution of nervous symptoms between this war and the last war as noted in England. In the last war soldiers suffered from shell shock which was simply a form of hysteria induced by their experiences in being under shell fire. These soldiers found that when they were reduced to a state of uselessness, they were sent back to England and put in a nice, safe hospital. But in this war, behind the lines in the civilian population it is as dangerous or even more dangerous than on the front lines, so the soldier learns to control his shell shock.

However, as time and circumstances permit, the tried and tested methods of psychological treatment are those which can be used in the case of war nerves—first, suggestion; second, persuasion or moralization; third, rest and isolation; fourth, personality analysis, and fifth, re-education and guidance.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

J. C. S.: Is there any harm in taking an overdose of vitamins? Answer: Toxic symptoms have been reported from the excessive use of vitamin D and thiamine chloride (vitamin B).
P. V.: Can a tumor of the brain be X-rayed?

Answer: Neither the brain itself nor a tumor of the brain throws a shadow on the X-ray film, but by emptying the ventricles of the brain of their fluid and allowing air to flow into them, deformities are shown up which indicate the presence of a tumor.

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO

TOMMY supposed, since things did seem to be perking up, with Tibby suddenly, unaccountably being nice to him, that he ought to be willing to continue to let Steena manage her campaign. If she had a plan, however, he wished she would tell him what it was. "Why not let me in on it?" he suggested.

Steena was evasive; she said, as she had before, just to leave everything to her. She assured him that if he did, everything would work out smoothly for each of them.

Tommy had to be satisfied with that, although he actually was not. He was like a race horse at the post, eager to be off, keyed to fever pitch. He wanted to race to the finish, which, of course, was Tibby. He wanted to clear matters up with her.

But he supposed that Steena, being so clever, knew best. He did not really believe that Tibby was jealous just because he had been sending Steena flowers and pretending to give her a rush. He supposed, rather, that Tibby wondered what had come over him, why he was behaving so unnaturally. Still the fact remained that Tib had changed, that she had gone out of the post, eager to be off, keyed to fever pitch. He wanted to race to the finish, which, of course, was Tibby. He wanted to clear matters up with her.

The next time the florist's boy delivered flowers there were two boxes, the usual long one with red roses addressed to Steena, and a smaller one addressed to Miss Elizabeth Lane. These last Tommy had paid for himself, because naturally he did not want to charge them to Steena's account.

"Violets!" Tibby exclaimed, lifting the fragrant, dewy blossoms from waxed paper. "Imagine violets at this time of year!" They reminded her of the springs she had gone walking with Tommy in the woods back home in search of the first wild flowers. Was that why he had sent them? To remind her of those other springs, to tell her that they might come again one day, that everything, even friendship, was not over between them?

"Wasn't it nice of Tommy?" Steena said, although she did not think it nice of him at all, not when he had promised to leave everything up to her. "I told him I was sure you liked violets," she added. That was only a very white fib; Tibby could draw her own conclusions from it, however. Everything was fair in the game Steena had to play.

The stars in Tibby's dark eyes faded; the brief lift of happiness left her heart. If Steena had told Tommy to send the violets, as she must if she had suggested what flowers to send, they did not have any meaning.

"You see," Steena hurried on, since this seemed an excellent opening if she were to try to carry out the plan she had, "it's all rather mixed up, you and Tommy having been such friends, but you know, you said, Tibby, that you didn't mind if I went out with him. I hope you won't mind what I'm going to tell you now." Steena's plan was still a bit vague, but she knew the time had come to do something drastic, to stir Wayne up and to make Tibby realize it was Tommy she apparently cared for.

"I shan't mind," Tibby said. She put the violets back in their waxed paper.

"Of course," Steena said, still speaking so that Tibby could put what construction she wished on the words. "Tommy hasn't actually asked me . . . yet. But I just wanted to be sure you wouldn't feel badly in case he does." Steena dropped her long lashes over her narrowed green eyes, but she could see that there were no stars in Tibby's dark ones now. "A girl always KNOWS, you know," she added.

Tibby put the lid back on the box. The violets would die if they were not put in water, but what did that matter? It was odd, but it seemed as if nothing ever would matter very much again. "I shan't feel bad," Tibby said. How could you, when you felt as if you never would feel anything any more? "I hope," she added, "that you both will be very happy if Tommy does ask you to marry him, Steena."

That was the proper thing to say, wasn't it? Steena had said that a girl always knew, meaning her own heart, her answer, as well as when a man had lost his heart to her. Steena had had so much experience in affairs of the heart that she ought to know all right.

"Thank you for saying that," Steena said. She meant that, for Tommy knew Tibby did not know it herself. Again she told herself that it was not her fault if Tibby jumped at the wrong conclusions instead of the right ones. She was not at all sure that Tommy would approve of her method, but he ought to be mighty well pleased with the result. "I promise you you'll be the first to know when it happens," she said.

Steena hoped that Wayne would react as well. If he thought she was considering marrying someone else, he would realize he would have to do something to put a stop to it. He would HAVE to make his gift a diamond solitaire, although Wayne might not be as easily misled as Tibby by a few vague hints. Steena might have to think up some way to convince him thoroughly.

Her plan was fairly well formulated now, as well as started, like a ball that would gather momentum as it ran down hill. All Steena had to do was to give it a little push.

Well, Tibby told herself, that's

that! It had not been any use for her to make one last attempt to be nice to Tommy, to regain the old familiar footing. She knew now it never could be regained, certainly not if Tommy and Steena should become engaged. It had not taken him long, she reflected, to get over the old love and onto the new. Maybe that was why she felt as she did about it, sort of hurt and bewildered and as if it could not possibly come true.

Of course it could. It would be a very good thing in many ways if it happened. As she had thought before this, it would be a good thing for Tommy to marry someone with money of her own, with the right connections. These were valuable assets for a young doctor to consider in choosing a wife. Tommy had not thought of them when he had asked Tibby to marry him—oh, how long ago that seemed! He would, no doubt, if he asked Steena, although maybe those were not what would count with him, either. Maybe this time Tommy, in proposing to a girl, would be certain, so that he would not have to withdraw his proposal right away.

It would be a good thing for Steena, as well. If she married Tommy, it would be for love, not for the millions that he did not have. Maybe Steena had never considered that love mattered most, although that did not seem like Steena. Mary had said that Tommy had "everything," since he was handsome and honest and clean. Tibby hoped that Steena would appreciate all that.

Love certainly changed things. It changed everything for Tibby, even the idea that Tommy might ask Steena to marry him. She did not realize that she was being femininely inconsistent, because Tibby herself was considering becoming engaged to someone else, too. At least she had promised Wayne she would let him know as soon as she could, but that seemed different, somehow.

Tommy would not care now if Tibby married a man too old and with too much money. It would not make a dent in him even. Steena would not mind, either, although she had so frankly admitted that she had hoped to land Wayne and his millions for herself.

There seemed no reason why Tibby should not give Wayne the answer he wanted. He had said it did not matter whether she was sure she loved him or not.

She was going out with him tonight. She supposed she was as sure now as she ever would be. It was silly for her to feel so upset, so sort of weepy, as if what she wanted most was a good old-fashioned cry. Maybe every girl felt like that when she finally reached an important decision.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . . Hour By Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up and about the ville in sunshine that I hoped indicated the end of the rainy season. Have had plenty of moisture for a while. Weeds getting a great start in gardens and corn fields, and some corn yet to be planted. Wheat looks great, and the earliest harvest of many a year is indicated. Unless something unexpected hits that wheat we also should have a bumper crop. Storage of grain will be a big problem this year. Ships and rail cars that were used for storage in years gone now are transporting sinews of war.

Meet the Big Sis. Grace Valentine owns a great turkey gobbler. Two days he was away from home, and Grace made a tour of the farm looking for him. And she found him, too. Sitting on a nest of eggs. Had chased the hen away and was keeping house all by himself. He in turn was chased back to the barnlot and the hen reinstalled in her proper domain, but the Big Sis got out, returned to the nest and chased the hen away. There is that gobbler today just about to become a "mother." Believe it or not.

Among the very last to abandon plans for northern fishing trips this year were Bill Cady and Fred Wittich. But they have given in, finally. Well, there are many worse places to fish than this territory, and the scenery along some of our streams is almost as good as along many bodies of water in the far north. In the evening did attend the Defense Council meeting at the postoffice and heard reports indicating progress in all departments. Tests of the efficiency of defense organizations now are being planned for the district, and some of them will be real tests. More and more does Ohio become the center of the nation's defense effort and we stand in as much danger here as in any part of the land. One trouble is that the older folk who remember the last war think that this is another struggle like that one. The worst that could possibly happen to us then was a sub raid on the Atlantic coast. Now, almost anything can happen, and may. We can be prepared to meet any possible emergency or we can be prepared to take the consequences. And the consequences will not be pleasant. Of that you may be absolutely certain.

personality, has launched a one-man campaign to revive George M. Cohan's "Over There"—perhaps the most famous war song ever written—in an effort to make it the fighting song of America during this war. "To date," says Block, "countless new war songs have been written, published and played on the air. Even a few old ones from World War I have been revived. But none begin to compare with 'Over There.' It served us well in 1917-18, it can do the same today. I'll plug it on the air every chance I get!"

EDDY'S SONGS

Continuing prominent featuring of patriotic songs, Nelson Eddy will sing "Your Land and My Land" by Sigmund Romberg on his program Wednesday May 27 at 8 p. m.

Eddy also will be heard in "The Kashmiri Love Song," "I've Got Plenty of Nothin'" from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" and "Tomorrow." Nadine Conner, lovely lyric soprano of the series, will be heard in several solos and the Eddy-Conner duet will be "Thine Alone." Robert Armbruster's orchestra provides accompaniment for the singers and the Old Gold chorus of eight men and four women is featured in certain of the songs.

RADIO BRIEFS

Meredith Willson, the conductor and composer, has had many difficult things to do in radio and has always acquitted himself well. Meredith is now faced with perhaps the toughest assignment of his career. He will have to provide proper musical background for the uncertain voice of Frank Morgan. It seems that Morgan has decided to premiere a new tune called "Uncle Sam Stands Up" by Ben Hecht and Ferde Grofe. The boys in the Willson orchestra shudder at the thought but being nice fellows they've decided to string along.

Eddie Cantor is putting on a real blitz in lining up top names for his concluding weeks of "Time to Smile." Among the guests he intends to have are Gracie Allen, Jack Benny and Red Skelton. In return, Cantor will probably appear on their shows.

Red Ferrington, comedian on the Horace Heidt "Treasure Chest" program, got a picture bid but elected to stay with Heidt.

Kate Smith made her annual trip to the antique show at the Westchester County Center in White Plains, N. Y., last week. The singer-commentator brought home antique news which she offered listeners of her daytime program.

Hi Brown, busy young man, now has three network shows under his direction on as many different channels. He guides "Inner Sanctum Mysteries" on the Blue network Sundays, holds the megaphone on "The Thin Man" via the Red network Wednesdays and is the boss man on "Bulldog Drummond" over MBS Mondays.

At the end of the 18th century Philadelphia was the heart of the United States. It was the largest city and also was serving as the temporary capital pending the completion of Washington.

Wife Preservers

If you are inclined to drop your electric razor when shaving, tape a looped shoestring to the razor cord. The shaver can slip this loop over his thumb when shaving, and there is then no danger of dropping the razor to the floor.

Curt Davis in Neat Job; McCormick's Streak Ends

By International News Service

There is positively no truth to the rumor that the Philadelphia Phillies baseball team will be allowed out, only at night—but that might not be a bad idea. The boys journeyed to Ebbets field yesterday to conduct a twilight baseball game experiment with the league-leading Dodgers but, if you will consult your favorite baseball page you will learn the results of games played at any hour of the day, so far as the Phils are concerned — are the same.

With Curt Davis, their thin man, hurling a two hit masterpiece the Dodgers knocked off the Phils 3 to 0 in the stunning time of one hour and twenty eight minutes. It was Davis' sixth win of the year, second shutout and the Brooks' sixth straight win over the last place gentlemen from the city of brotherly love.

Over in the American league, those power-ridden Yankees made to trounce the Cubs 10 to 2 in Chicago.

Three Cub hurlers, Schmitz, Mooty and Bithman, were assaulted in the first inning of this game. Enos Slaughter hit a homer during the parade and Ernie White had no trouble coasting to an easy victory.

Derringer's First

The Cincinnati Reds moved into the first division as Paul Derringer scored his first win of the year in checking the Pittsburgh Pirates, 6 to 1 in a night game. The loss was the tenth in the last 13 starts for the Frischmen and dropped the Pirates into fifth place.

First Baseman Frank McCormick had his 652 consecutive service game streak snapped tonight when he was unable to play because of an injured back. McCormick has participated in every championship game with the Reds since he opened the 1938 season.

Out in Cleveland the Army emergency relief fund and the Navy relief fund shared the receipts of a charity game which saw the White Sox go on a four run rampage in the final inning to whip the Indians 5 to 1. Chubby Dean was driven from the mound after battling the Sox all the way and the Chicagoans continued their drive on his successor, Clint Brown, collecting 12 hits in all.

The crowd of 7,950 contributed a total of $9,390 to the fund. In another twilight game, the St. Louis Browns came from behind to push across tallies in each of the last two innings to nose out the Detroit Tigers 3 to 2 in St. Louis.

In another night game the Washington Senators staggered to a 5-3 win over the Philadelphia Athletics.

FRANK MCCORMICK

It fourteen wins in their last seventeen games by belting over the fading Red Sox 3 to 1 to add another game to their lead over the Cleveland Indians. Those fighting Boston Braves, thanks to Outfielder Max West's first homer of the year whipped the Giants in Boston, 3 to 1, to remain in second place while the Cardinals regained their batting eyes and held a hitting field day.

ED DUDLEY HITS SPLENDID SCORE TO PACE STARS

By LAWTON CARVER

SEAVIEW COUNTRY CLUB, Atlantic City, N. J., May 26—Big Ed Dudley today needed a 70 to tie the qualifying record in the national professional golf championship and the rest of the field needed some good golf to catch him.

Playing under perfect conditions yesterday, the president of the P.G.A. showed his constituents what is meant by ripping par apart when he played the first of two qualifying rounds in 66 and with that led the field to the surprise of everyone.

Never winner of a major title beyond the statue of the Western Open, the long, broad-beamed pro from Colorado Springs, Colo., gave the rest something to shoot at when he went around in six under par on the first swing to leave himself in position to at least deadlock Fred Morrison of 1929 and Frank Moore of 1938, who qualified with the all-time record of 136. A 70 today was Dudley's goal.

A member of the Ryder cup teams of 1929, 1933 and 1937 and long recognized as a fine shot-maker who might get hot at any time, Dudley was on the beam yesterday and played no more than two bad shots on his entire round as he left Corporal Jim Turnesa, of Fort Dix, Sam Byrd, the ex-Major league ball player, and Light Horse Harry Cooper a stroke behind, all with 67s.

Thus he was virtually certain to qualify with the playing of today's round for the beginning of match play tomorrow when the 31 low scorers and Corporal Vic Ghezzi, the defending champion and an automatic qualifier, will leave at each other for 36 hole man-to-man battles lasting through next Sunday.

The rest will fall by the wayside for the duration and it will be Ghezzi again or a successor from among the other 31.

BUCKEYE FRESHMAN WINS CENTRAL DISTRICT HONOR

COLUMBUS, May 26—Bobby Campbell, 18-year-old freshman at Ohio State university, today anxiously looked forward to the regional Hale America golf tournament at Cincinnati, June 6-7, following his victory in the Central District qualifier in Columbus over three other title aspirants.

Campbell, son of the Granville Country club's pro, Bill Campbell, blazed the trail for the district with two rounds of 78, 14 strokes over par for the 36 holes.

At the end of 18, Campbell stood third in the field of four, four strokes back of Sted Tinker, Columbus, and one shot behind Harold Mizer, Zanesville pro. The only higher score was George Dewey's — 84.

But as Tinker faltered in the stretch grind, Campbell kept plugging away and wound up with his 156 while Tinker's card showed 158, Mizer, 159 and Dewey, 165.

$100,000 TO BE SOUGHT AT ARMY RELIEF EVENT

NEW YORK, May 26—Plans to raise some $100,000 at the Army emergency relief track and field carnival at Randall's island stadium, June 19 and 20, were discussed today at a special luncheon called by Brigadier General John Ross Delafaire, chairman of the organizing committee.

Chairman Delafaire, who will be assisted by Orie H. Kelly, as treasurer and such other distinguished committee men as Vice-President Henry A. Wallace, Under-Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson and Donald M. Nelson, said that this meet would be the only one sponsored by the AER society this year.

BREWERS ON TOP AGAIN; RED BIRDS WIN 8 TO 6

COLUMBUS, May 26—The baseball season gets older only to find Milwaukee more firmly entrenched in the top slot of the American Association standings.

The Brewers shoved over three unearned runs in the eighth last night to mark up a 4-1 triumph over Louisville. Up to that time it had been a pitchers battle between the Colonel's Andy Karl and the ultimate winner, Roxie Lawson.

Second-place Kansas City, however, maintained pace with the leaders, although 2½ games behind, by soundly thumping Indianapolis, 12-0, with Volpi hurling the eight-hit shutout while his mates garnered 12 bingles. Five Indian errors helped the Blues' cause.

The Toledo Mudhens exploded a six-run barrage in the fifth to whip St. Paul, 6-5. Toledo got five of its ten hits in its one scoring stanza, sending Jow Bowman to the showers.

The defending loop champions, the Columbus Red Birds, overcame a five-run deficit by shoving over five tallies in the sixth canto and adding two more in the eighth to tame the Minneapolis Millers, 8-6. Each side used three hurlers, with the Birds getting 14 hits to the Millers' eight.

SAVOLD BLASTS LOU NOVA FROM SHOT AT CHAMP

Des Moines Heavyweight Wins On Technical Knockout In Eight Rounds

YOGI MAN CUT BADLY

Big Washington Crowd Helps Service Funds; Abrams To Meet Tony Zale

By BILL ZIMMERMAN

WASHINGTON, May 26 — Lee Savold, blond Des Moines heavyweight, today was in line for a shot at Champion Joe Louis this Summer, after scoring a technical knockout over Lou Nova, the former yogi man of California.

Savold, whose punishing left hook had Nova bleeding profusely from his head, eyes and nose, may be signed up by Promoter Mike Jacobs for a title go with the Brown bomber in Washington in September.

Staged for the benefit of the Navy Relief Society, the scheduled 10-round Savold-Nova bout was stopped at the request of Nova's corner 10

Defense Council Will Use Telephone Building For Its Control Center

State Funds To Be Used To Install Warning System; Training To Begin For Many In Various Capacities

Circleville's Defense Council at its meeting Monday night decided on use of the basement of the new Telephone building as a temporary emergency control center pending establishment of the regular center in the basement of the Post Office. Divisional heads of the council will have access to sufficient telephones to meet the complicated communications requirements. In the event of a warning some 400 persons will have to be notified to take their posts. Funds for the placement of phones at the regular control center are not available.

The benefit concert given by the high school band provided $60 for the Council, but most of this money has been used for purchase of practice incendiary bombs to be used in training of auxiliary firemen, air raid wardens and fire watchers. Funds to be received from the recent state distribution to counties will be needed to install the air raid warning system recommended by the government.

George Foreman was named treasurer of the Council and the group decided to spend money only on authorization of a majority vote in Council. Fred Clark's recommendation of building big bomb shelters at the schools was referred to the school board and city council.

Fire defense training of Air Raid Wardens will start this week following completion of the 20 hour first aid training course

SCIOTO CLEANER, SEWAGE PLANT CHIEF DISCLOSES

Fishermen who will have to confine their activities to local waters for the duration were given a word of cheer Monday evening when Ervin Leist, sewage disposal plant superintendent, told Kiwanians that the Scioto river is becoming much cleaner and that recent tests had shown that the river is clean enough to permit fish to survive in it.

The superintendent explained work of the department and quoted numerous figures concerning its operation.

About a dozen Kiwanians indicated intent to attend the Shrine night baseball game at Columbus Wednesday.

by most of the Wardens. Auxiliary firemen will start their 30 hour training course next week and fire watchers will be called in for special training within the next ten days.

Fire watchers will patrol all districts of the city in the event of an emergency and will be trained to cope with incendiary bombs and to assist citizens in controlling fires in homes and other buildings. They will work in small units of three or four men. More volunteers are needed for this division. Enlistments will be accepted by any member of the council or at the Circleville Herald office.

DISCUSSION OF RATIONING TASK HELD BY BOARDS

Rationing boards of the various districts of the county met Monday evening in the county court room for a general discussion of rationing procedure under new regulations.

At this meeting a county wide policy was adopted in respect to filing of forms and interpretation of varied questions relative to the rationing program.

In regard to the canning sugar program new rules were carefully studied and the group decided that the separate boards would announce the days for this registration in their own territory. When a county sub-board decides that it will approve sugar requests it will announce the opening of applications in its area. South Bloomfield, Commercial Point and Deer-creek township boards are at present releasing sugar for canning and as the other boards do so it will be announced.

Waldo E. Sexton of Vero Beach, Fla., has recently acquired the largest single board of mahogany in existence. It is a plank four inches thick, five feet wide and 35 feet long, and weighing nearly two tons. It appeared first at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in St. Louis in 1904, has since lain in the basement of the American Museum of Natural History, and in various warehouses of furniture makers. Mr. Sexton has built a room to house this huge table.

WPB TO CONFER ON NATIONWIDE FUEL RATIONING

Program For Two Western States Cancelled By Last-Minute Decree

CONFERENCE VITAL ONE

Statement From Washington On Pipelines, Barges To Be Made Soon

WASHINGTON, May 26—The War Production Board met today to discuss nationwide rationing of gasoline as a rubber conservation measure on the heels of an announcement that plans for rationing in Washington and Oregon on June 1 had been canceled.

Some 700,000 motorists in the two Pacific coast states were to have registered Friday and Saturday for ration cards, but an eleventh-hour announcement from the Office of Price Administration halted the program.

OPA said the registration was canceled because of a "marked improvement over the last few days in gasoline supplies in both states."

Officials pointed out, however, that the cancellation had no bearing on preparations for nationwide rationing, since the latter is designed to preserve automobile tires and does not stem from a shortage of gasoline in middle western and western sections of the nation.

There was no indication as to whether Defense Transportation Director Joseph B. Eastman would have his detailed program for nationwide rationing ready for consideration of the WPB at today's meeting, but a general discussion of the subject was assured.

Must Conserve Tires

Both WPB Chief Donald M. Nelson and Rubber Czar Arthur Newhall have warned that the nation's most precious stock of rubber—automobile tires—must be conserved and unnecessary driving eliminated.

Sen. Lee (D) Okla., asked President Roosevelt to take the people into his confidence regarding the situation and proposed that a conference of representatives of oil producing states be called to examine the supply problem before any decision is reached on extending the program.

After a conference with the President, Majority Leader Barkley said that the White House probably will issue a statement within the next few days concerning the possibility of new pipelines and barges to relieve the east coast shortage.

Originally, the WPB had ordered deliveries of gasoline to filling stations in Washington and Oregon restricted to 50 percent of normal beginning June 1. Current deliveries have been curtailed 33 1/3 percent.

Because of the improvement in supplies, however, Price Administrator Henderson and Oil Coordinator Ickes said they would recommend to the WPB that curtailment of gasoline deliveries to dealers in the two states be continued at 33 1/3 percent, obviating the need for rationing to motorists.

SUMMER STORE HOLIDAY PLANS STILL UNCERTAIN

Circleville retail merchants met Monday evening with bankers of the city to discuss possibility of closing on Thursday afternoons during the Summer months. Bankers expressed their wish to cooperate in the program, but various details were brought up that might interfere with such a step.

The local storekeepers think that Thursday would be a better day in so much as many rural folk come to town on Wednesday for the weekly livestock sale and by remaining open on that day there would be no necessity of doubling the trips made by the rural people.

Bankers have been closing Wednesday afternoon for the last 30 years.

However, the question was left in the hands of the bankers and as soon as they wish to take definite action on the proposal they are to call a general meeting of all retailers, doctors, dentists and other merchants.

BANK TELLER, 25, STEALS $171,000 IN THREE YEARS

NEW YORK, May 26—A 25-year-old bank teller, whose weekly pay check totaled $27, today was held for grand jury action after confessing he embezzled $171,000 from the Knickerbocker Federal Savings and Loan association since April, 1939.

Assistant District Attorney Herman T. Stichman said that Charles J. Marsh admitted the embezzlements began three months after his employment.

Stichman said Marsh confessed using $65,000 to finance a small concern; $20,000 for airplane parts, and $55,000 for living expenses and a luxurious apartment he set up for his wife and their baby at Hawlitt, L. I. He said the rest of the money was loaned out to friends.

The theft is covered by insurance and bond.

One stumbling block to entering the Navy is defective eye-sight. And out in Detroit two optometrists, Drs. John Ross and L. E. Rehner, have been giving their services at nights to youngsters from the University of Michigan who have passed all their navy tests—except for their eyes.

The remedy prescribed by Drs. Ross and Rehner is very simple—also very similar to that prescribed by the Navy—chiefly eye-exercise, plus plenty of carrot juice.

The exercise includes moving the eyes sidewise, then up and down, then diagonally for fifteen minutes in the morning and fifteen minutes at night. After this, the Navy prescribes massaging the closed eyes with a large thumb for five minutes.

Drs. Ross and Rehner also advise using the eyes outdoors to look around as much as possible without turning the head. What the eyes need, they say is plenty of muscular exercise, for eyes are like leg muscles, arms or anything else.

The two doctors paid tribute to the eagerness of hundreds of young men to get into the service, and so these scientists are working nights to do their part to help them.

Defense Council Will Use Telephone Building For Its Control Center

State Funds To Be Used To Install Warning System; Training To Begin For Many In Various Capacities

Circleville's Defense Council at its meeting Monday night decided on use of the basement of the new Telephone building as a temporary emergency control center pending establishment of the regular center in the basement of the Post Office. Divisional heads of the council will have access to sufficient telephones to meet the complicated communications requirements. In the event of a warning some 400 persons will have to be notified to take their posts. Funds for the placement of phones at the regular control center are not available.

The benefit concert given by the high school band provided $60 for the council, but most of this money has been used for purchase of practice incendiary bombs to be used in training of auxiliary firemen, air raid wardens and fire watchers. Funds to be received from the recent state distribution to counties will be needed to install the air raid warning system recommended by the government.

George Foresman was named treasurer of the Council and the group decided to spend money only on authorization of a majority vote in Council. Fred Clark's recommendation of building big bomb shelters at the schools was referred to the school board and city council.

Fire defense training of Air Raid Wardens will start this week end following completion of the 20 hour first aid training course

WPB TO CONFER ON NATIONWIDE FUEL RATIONING

Program For Two Western States Cancelled By Last-Minute Decree

CONFERENCE VITAL ONE

Statement From Washington On Pipelines, Barges To Be Made Soon

WASHINGTON, May 26—The War Production Board met today to discuss nationwide rationing of gasoline as a rubber conservation measure on the heels of an announcement that plans for rationing in Washington and Oregon on June 1 had been canceled.

Some 700,000 motorists in the two Pacific coast states were to have registered Friday and Saturday for ration cards, but an eleventh-hour announcement from the Office of Price Administration halted the program.

OPA said the registration was canceled because of a "marked improvement over the last few days in gasoline supplies in both states."

Officials pointed out, however, that the cancellation had no bearing on preparations for nationwide rationing, since the latter is designed to preserve automobile tires and does not stem from a shortage of gasoline in middle western and western sections of the nation.

There was no indication as to whether Defense Transportation Director Joseph B. Eastman would have his detailed program for nationwide rationing ready for consideration of the WPB at today's meeting, but a general discussion of the subject was assured.

Must Conserve Tires

Both WPB Chief Donald M. Nelson and Rubber Czar Arthur Newhall have warned that the nation's most precious stock of rubber—automobile tires—must be conserved and unnecessary driving eliminated.

Sen. Lee (D) Okla., asked President Roosevelt to take the people into his confidence regarding the situation and proposed that a conference of representatives of oil producing states be called to examine the supply problem before any decision is reached on extending the program.

After a conference with the President, Majority Leader Barkley said that the White House probably will issue a statement within the next few days concerning the possibility of new pipelines and barges to relieve the east coast shortage.

Originally, the WPB had ordered deliveries of gasoline to filling stations in Washington and Oregon restricted to 50 percent of normal beginning June 1. Current deliveries have been curtailed 33 1/2 percent.

Because of the improvement in supplies, however, Price Administrator Henderson and Oil Coordinator Ickes said they would recommend to the WPB that curtailment of gasoline deliveries to dealers in the two states be continued at 33 1/2 percent, obviating the need for rationing to motorists.

In regard to the canning sugar program new rules were carefully studied and the group decided that the separate boards would announce the days for this registration in their own territory. When a county sub-board decides that it will approve sugar requests it will announce the opening of applications in its area. South Bloomfield, Commercial Point and Deer Creek township boards are at present releasing sugar for canning and as the other boards do so it will be announced.

Waldo E. Sexton of Vero Beach, Fla., has recently acquired the largest single board of mahogany in existence. It is a plank four inches thick, five feet wide and 35 feet long, and weighing nearly two tons. It appeared first at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in St. Louis in 1904, has since lain in the basement of the American Museum of Natural History, and in various warehouses of furniture makers. Mr. Sexton has built a room to house this huge table.
